Naval Expert on the Situation

London, Aug. 9.-Archibald Hund, the naval expert of the Lon don Daily Telegraph, says: "Sea power or command of the sea may be exercised without the main fleets becoming engaged at all. They may effect their object by what Admiral Mahan called 'static force.' So long as the German fleet is placed in such circumstances that it must either remain in port under shelter of fortifications and of its screen of destroyers or risk fighting at a manifest disadvantage, these conditions may continue to rule. Meanwhile the theatre of war is closed to German merchant ships.

The long list of captures of German merchantmen appearing every day are evidence of exercise of sea pressure. Nothing in the shape of food can enter Germany by sea. Her seaboard supplies of every kind are stopped. The cessation of her trade and commerce and the consequent scarcity will presently have an effect upon her population generally and also upon the provisioning of her huge military

New York, Aug. 9 .- General Nelson Miles foresees that the air forces will have a large part in deciding the great European conflict.

"If the war is prolonged for a great period of time," he says, "it will be due not to the land forces or to the dreadnoughts, but to the forces of the air and the wireless."

General Miles, who is at the summe home of Nathan Straus at Mamaro-neck, said Friday. "The use of wire-less telegraphy is a new element in warfare. # The French Charge

Furiously, Germans Retire in Disorder

Paris, Aug. 9.—French soldiers are pressing forward in Alsace-Lorraine. A German defending army has been driven back on the fortress of Muelhausen, which is now being besieged by the invaders. The town of Altkirch has been taken by the French, who are advancing in full force from Belfort. In the north the French from Nancy have clashed with the Germans at a point inside Luxemburg. The war office claims a victory in the preliminary skirmishing and says the engagements have taken on the propertions of a general battle.

The French minister of war gives the following official account of the occupation of Muelhausen, in Alsace-Lorraine, by the French Saturday: "During the march from Altkirch the French forces passed the abandoned earthworks and defences of Muelhausen The populace came out from the town and in a frenzy of delight welcomed the French troops. The cavalry galloped through the streets and pursued the German rear guard. The French established themselves north of Muelhausen.

"Rout is the only word with which to describe the German retreat. The French losses were not excessive when the result is considered. The occupation of Muelhausen, the great industrial and intellectual centre of Alsace, will reverberate through Europe.

"The Germans retired in the direction of Neu Breisach. The whole of Alsace will rise against them and aggravate their position."

The minister of war sent a congratulatory telegram to General Joffre, saying: "This initial success will have a moral effect in bringing profound satisfaction to the nation. I thank you in the name of the government.

It was nightfall Friday when the advance guard of the French brigade approached Altkirch, says the official statement. The French began the assault with ardor, a regiment distinguishing itself in a furious charge, shortly after which the Germans retired in disorder.

A regiment of French cavalry followed the enemy, pursuing them in the direction of Wallheim and Tugolischen, inflicting serious losses upon them. A French colonel and seven of his men were wounded. Darkness permitted the Germans to conceal themselves and the troops of France entered the city amid cheers of the people. All the windows of the houses were thrown open, veterans of 1870 embraced the French soldiers and a great shout resounded.

At dawn the advance guard resumed its march. The cavalry failed to find German patrols, and the march of the entire brigade on Muelhausen was begun.

In the afternoon of Saturday the scouts found that numerous and important defences protecting the city had been abandoned and in less than half an hour later the French, wildly cheering the tricolor, occupied Melhausen. Later it was learned that the Germans had retired in the direction of Neu Brei-The spirit of the troops was excellent and the occupation of the city will have a great effect.

General Joffre, who has received the congratulations of the war department, addressed a proclamation to Alsace, saying that the French soldiers were the first workers in a great task of revenge.
